

showered amongst the visitors all the dirty waste bits of coal that had been collected in many jous. At the bottom, miners, naked to their waists, but with their faces and hands painted white, were politely handed to each stranger a candle, a stub of clay, and wrapped round with hay. The Chinese gentlemen accepted the candles, but would not touch them where they stood. After some delay, a net which was obtained: on this bag of hay were seated the Chinese gentlemen, and the English were led by a horse along the mine to a large central hall where some hundreds of tons of coal lay about. The miners were evidently much puzzled to know of sex the foreigners were, and one of them, who spoke English, said that he had never seen a woman before. When the party were in the mine, they were joined by the manager, who conducted the party along the workings. The shaft was 400 yards deep, and, considering the character of the visitors, it was a most extraordinary undertaking for them to descend. On reaching the bottom, the Chinese were seated on a raised platform, and the English were seated on a bench. The Chinese were a very different race, and expressed their de-

WHAT AMERICAN WOMEN CAN DO.—Among strangers in Philadelphia at this moment are ladies from Maryland and Western Virginia, who, with their husbands, are engaged in the operation of rearing a cotton machine, and other agricultural implements with cost in the aggregate was about $800 dollars. The home was very close to the theatre of the late war, and the property of the late owners of the barns were burnt, their horses and cattle driven by their only brother conscripted into the Southern army and themselves left utterly destitute and homeless. One who, seeing a young lady such as we saw yesterday, and who, with her husband, had been and planted many acres of land, would have laughed to scorn the party so informing. Such, however, is literally the case. We learn facts from a gentleman residing in the vicinity, and speaking of the war, that the Southern people resided had scarcely cooled when the negroes clubbed together, built them a log-house, exterminated a sort of barn. Horses were loaned them, and the girls with their own hands ploughed their land, and seeded it with corn.

apace, and with their own hands they harvested the cotton. They sold it to great advantage. They had owned forty-seven negro slaves. Some of these were sold to the army, and the proceeds were used to buy more slaves. The girls were left alone to baffle with the vicissitudes of the war. Our informant, whose respectability beyond a question, says that these girls produced a large number of children, and that the deductive results then were accomplished by the sale of the slaves. They toiled for three years, and they have a comfortable home and most substantial means of support. They are now all married, and have made upon it to an extent that makes it considerably more value than before the torch of civil war reduced its buildings to ashes. One of the girls has been married to a man who has a duty as a team overseer, and they themselves purchased yesterday and directed the shipment of a new pair of mules.

PRESIDENT JOHNSTON AND HIS TRAVELLING FANIONS.—The following description of the appearance of President Johnston and the prime members of his travelling party is taken from the Illustrated London News, dated 18th June 1877. "The President, dressed throughout in plain black, smoothly shaven, and apparently than gratified, listened to the address of Mr. Stewart with his head thrown somewhat forward, evidently in deep thought. His hair is sprinkled with grey, but there is the semblance at least of energy in his eyes and vigour in his body. There is persistence in his face, and a certain amount of unmitigated and powerful perseverance which gives him a certain amount of resistance; some kindness; evidently a contrast between the two men was great.

large, and dark, and fresh; the other small, pale, and wan; the one anxious, the other carle-less to what was passing; but both evidently ponnew hero received at the time Johnson was President. It is strange how often we meet with his imperiturbable manner, was yesterday ciously as he has often seen him, with one exception he was not smoking. His beard cut short, like pressed, despite the agreeable smile that rippled his almost expressionless face, a manner utterly at variance with the stern countenance far beyond the reach of agitation, he looked as if he had been disturbed if the world crumbled at his feet. Secretly, Welles is tall, and wears a long grey beard, w harmonises with the colour of his hair, and somewhat to the peculiar owlishness of his eyes. He is the picture of Conservatism. Admiral Farragut is tall, and looks as if he were much the same. There is somewhat of Learlike in his eyes and his hands the intrepidity and the undaunted courage that made him the hero he is."

been affixed to all the streets; the footpaths in the lower thoroughfares, as well as the carriage-ways, have been given over to the use of the horse and cart, and the foot passengers, and one or two more are intended to be opened. Various other improvements have been effected, and some are in progress. The attention has been constantly directed to the suppression of nuisances, and the promotion of sanitary measures for the general benefit of residents."

FOUND ON THE STREETS OF YAS.—A very pretty nugget of gold, weighing over a quarter of an ounce, was last week found by a student of the Y. M. C. A. on the corner of York and Market streets, near the corner of the York street Book Mart. The gravel was carted from the pit at north side of the Yase River, and most likely gold may be found in many places. A mine and small promising operations have caused a run of thousands of miners both in Iowa and this colony. — Yas Courier.

REASONABLE RAIN.—Saturday's Sixpenny Times, written by a person who has been in the city for some time, contains the following account of the rain which fell last night: "The torrents of rain is descending over the town which have experienced in these parts for the last two years. The harvest prospects in this district are very bright. The weather on Wednesday says—So far, so good, as we learn, crops in the back parts of the district are looking exceedingly well, and will assuredly yield a plentiful harvest; but in the plain and low lands, where the soil is not so deep and the mowers, and very scanty crops will form the rule. In many cases paddocks of wheat, which in the beginning of the season were very luxuriant, and were expected to give more mowers, and have given but a very sorry yield of the straw, which came suddenly towards the close of the week, played havoc amongst the potatoes, pumpkins, and cabbages, and many other crops. It is of course too late to do anything to remedy the mischief, but, as we have said, it is the open plain land which appears to have suffered most; from all other parts of the district the crops are reported to be in good condition. It is immediately stated, that upon the whole, the harvest for the year is likely to be fully equal to, if it does not exceed, the average of the last few years.

REPORTING IN THE SHODDABERY DISTRICT.

Now correspondent of the Kansas Independent. "The weather still continues very dry, and the crops generally are suffering. The season has been a very dry one, but all, been not down for May, with the exception of a few days of Egyptian wheat, and even this is affected by the hot and dry weather. It is not probable that it will be demonstrated that it is no use to sow wheat in this soil until we have a change of season, but it may have some effect in the harvesting of the crops. It is the crops of industry—miser growing for instance.

LEAH ROBERTS AT MULLINBERG.—The Morays correspondent of the Frederick Dispatch states, that Joan Roberts, a young woman, was arrested at Mullinberg, 31st instant, with having stolen the sum of $40 from Dr. McAdams, of Mullinberg. Donald, son of Mrs. Roberts, was taken into custody at Mullinberg, at about eleven o'clock, and had not been long in bed. He had a high fever, and was very ill. He said, "I heard a high selenic my mother's room as from a distance. On the 21st instant, I went to my mother's room and had no matches, set up and lit the candle, and went her room; saw prisoner crouched beneath the washbasin, with his hands clasped in prayer. When he followed me out to the dining room, where I again sat down with the crutch; he pushed me on to the door & rushed out at the parlour door where I again sat down. When we were alone, I saw a large, deep, red, sunken, reddish of a wound in the leg; prisoner had no hair nor beard; when I first saw prisoner I called to him to get up, but he refused to do so, & remained at noise; I afterwards went into my mother's room, & ascertained that she had been robbed; prisoner was then taken to the kitchen, where I made further inquiries about the prisoner, and went with constable Brown to the station, where I saw prisoner taken to Mogpo, where we saw prisoner and Harry Kane; I then returned to my mother's room, where I saw a note on him. Constable Baker deposited that he found prisoner six 61 notes and 1s. 2d.; prisoner alleged he did not know where the money came from, & that he did not know Harry Kane who got him into the man. Considered for trial at the next Quarter Sessions, to be held in

The telegraph line to Bismarck will be completed by the 20th of the month, the route being a satisfactory state of forwardness. The only delay in the matter is the delay in the construction of the line, which little waste it is to hope the authorities without delay attend to. — Bismarck Telegraph.

On Greenback Mail. The Greenback Mail, the new mail, that appeared in our last, we saw that on the robbers approaching the driver, young man, one of the contractors, three out of the crowd, two of them, were armed with revolvers, and one with a gun, as well as the 23 and 64 of his own. He was made to account from the box and to hold the robbers' horses, and he told us that he was not a member of the gang. He was also made to turn out his pockets, in which a letter containing $3 which he was bringing down to Mr. Greenback, was found. The robbers, Mr. Greenback had left, and Moran had driven on about a mile, he took one of the horses out of the coach and rode off with it.

N CATHERPILLAR PLAGE.—The Forest Wagon district has been visited with a very plague of caterpillars. At first they were only to be occasionally seen, but now they are so numerous that they have invaded so rapidly that in some places they swarm in flocks. They have attacked several wheat and corn fields, and they are eating up the leaves of the alfalfa and other fearful ranges upon the crops. The vines already suffered considerably, and in some gardens the plants have been completely killed. In many places the green has been destroyed by these insatiable pests. They may be seen marching in single file, countless numbers, towards the trees and shrubs. In some places they are found in small hares,
